Hands-On Solutions for Medical Device Design and Assembly

Henkel Adds September Dates for Loctite® Medical Device Adhesive Training Workshops

Rocky Hill, Conn. — Henkel Corporation has added two September dates for Loctite® Medical Device Adhesive Training Workshops. These comprehensive programs address topics specifically related to the design and assembly of medical devices, including proper joint design for adhesive assembly, selecting the appropriate adhesive technology, and processing-equipment requirements.

The third in the series of 2009 Loctite® Medical Training Workshops will take place on Thursday, September 17, from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the Atlanta Marriott Northwest in Atlanta, Georgia. The fourth workshop for the year will be held on Wednesday, September 23, from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the Courtyard by Marriott in Lake Buena Vista, Florida. Both events are co-sponsored by Ellsworth Adhesives and include lunch at the conclusion of the workshop.

Design, product and manufacturing engineers who attend Loctite® Medical Device Adhesive Training Workshops benefit from intensive educational information and hands-on demonstrations of adhesives and equipment. Engineers will walk out with a solid knowledge of adhesives and will understand how to automate manual processes, improve profitability/process efficiency, decrease costs, improve product quality/reliability, and reduce process cycle times and work-in-progress.

To register for a seminar, go to www.henkelna.com/medicaladhesives, call 1-800-LOCTITE (1-800-562-8483), or email medical.adhesives@us.henkel.com.
